He has. unlike his noble fellow countryman Cavour lived to see his aspirations realised -to witness the completion of the unity of Italy, to see the historic city of the Seven Hills creeted into her capital, and her flag everywhere honoured and respected as that of a leading European Power. The knowledge that he had done so much to contribute to this result by his gallant efforts in the cause of Italian freedom and nationality must have been intensely gratifying to him, while the debt they owe to the sturdy soldier will ever be grate. fully remembered by his countrymen. His failings and his impetuous blundering inlater life will be forgotten in the knowledge that he had laboured, consistently and unselfishly, for the enfranchisement of his country. All the samples were collected from a tap in direct connection with the main in which the supply of water is continuous. Each menth the water was found turbid, such turbidity at times being excessive. It will be observed that in April there was a sudden increase in the Nitrogenous organic matterindicated by the greater yield of Albuminoid Ammonis. This continued with slight variations until December, when it again suddenly decreased. The rise corresponded with the beginning of the rains and increase of temperature, the fall with the decrease of temperature and rain. There was a decided increase of Chlorine in October, caused doubtless by the finat. typhoon of the 14th of that month blowing
